the author has made a careful selection of those statutes of more general interest, merely indicating, as to others, the tendency of the legislation and its relative merits. Another feature of special interest is the account of war emergency legislation contributed by Sir Courtney Ilbert, G. C. B., Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Society, and Mr. C. E. A. Bedwell, one of the editors. The volume as a whole is of unusual value and interest, and the material which it presents in such a compact and readable form has been collected and selected with discrimination, and discussed with critical ability.
